

Suspicious caller recently posed as a city of Tualatin employee

Police are warning Tualatin residents of the activities of a man posing as a City of Tualatin water bureau employee.

Recently officers got a report that a Tualatin resident received a call from someone claiming that they work with the City and need to get in the resident's home to inspect the water supply. The suspicious caller identified himself as 'Bill Goodpastor' and claimed that a recent contamination to the water system prompted his contact.

Investigators followed up with the City of Tualatin and confirmed that an employee by that name does not work for the city and that no contamination has occurred.

Beaverton residents should be alert to anyone asking to come into their home. When in doubt make the police aware of any suspicious behavior.
